YOUR PUPPY'S FIRST YEAR

Congratulations on your new furry family member!

Your sweet pup will give you tons of laughs, love, and puppy play. With your patience and consistent training, they'll learn their bond with you and their new pack, and you'll develop a best friend for life. While your veterinarian will help you learn the specific needs of your furry friend, most puppies follow common life stages.

★ BIRTH TO 4 WEEKS

During this time, puppies are most influenced by their mother and littermates. While touch and taste are present at birth, at around two to four weeks old eyes open, baby teeth break out, and they develop their hearing and sharp sense of smell.

4 WEEKS TO 3 MONTHS

At about eight weeks old, your puppy will be ready to go home with you. By this time, they've developed some social skills, an inhibited bite, and physical coordination. They may show signs of fear, so give them lots of positive training to help them overcome it.

PREPARE

Time to take your pup to the veterinarian! Discuss the best puppy food, feeding schedule, and training tips. If you haven't already, now is a great time to get medical insurance for your new family member. This may come in handy as your pup explores, chews, and grows.

3 TO 6 MONTHS

As your puppy begins teething, they'll likely feel the need to chew a lot to relieve the irritation in their gums. Provide lots of acceptable chew toys to avoid too much unwanted chewing on household items.

At four months old, they may experience another fear stage. Continue the positive training, and they'll outgrow it in no time!

SOCIALIZE

Social relationships start to become clear as they learn their place in the pack. This will include other animals in the home and you! They may challenge relationships and could become territorial. This is normal, so remain patient and diligent in training.

6 TO 9 MONTHS

Both male and female puppies can become sexually active and show sexual behavior, so now is a good time to decide if you're spaying or neutering. Females can get pregnant during their first heat, usually around six months old.

Expect your pup to continue testing or reinforcing their status in the household. They may become less interested in pleasing you, but it's all part of their development.

EXPLORE

They will likely go through another chewing phase as they explore their environment, which could result in ruined dog toys and damaged household objects. Don't worry, they will outgrow it, but have lots of chew toys on-hand.

9 TO 12 MONTHS

While both have more growing to do physically, puppies from larger breeds will continue to act more like puppies until about 18 months old, and pups from smaller breeds will have socially matured by about 12 months old.

With proper training and clear boundaries, your pup will start settling into their place in the pack without the need to continue testing rules and limitations.

ENGAGE

Continue engaging your pup in activities, keeping them excited and happy as they keep learning, growing, and loving you!
